HOME RUNNERS TO BE FEATURE at TANFORAN

By J. W. MARCHBANK

With the spring meeting at "New Tanforan" not far away fans are beginning to have the thrills that come with the promise of high class racing. At the session to open along toward the end of April emphasis will be placed on home-breds from nurseries in this vicinity. The "playing up" of California colts and fillies is in line with my policy of building up the breeding industry and racing game at one and the same time.

My Maid of Perth, winner in her only two starts, is a noteworthy example of what can be done by judicious mating. By the inbred Domino stallion, King Heather, which I bred, and from Lady Leighton, which I purchased as a yearling at Saratoga, the chestnut miss is of blood lines that would be hard to fault. There is no greater strain in the world than that of the American Domino. And Lady Leighton is by none other than imported Wormleighton, a grandson of the well known Desmond, of the mighty St. Simon line.

I read recently of the accomplishments of a filly at Hialeah, of the "champion" kind, just as is Maid of Perth, and in commenting on that two year old's victories, the writer said:

"Unless this filly is raced too strenously during the winter season, she may readily make her way later in the year."

Maid of Perth, named by the way, from Sir Walter Scott's famous novel, has not been at the post for more than one month, being given plenty of time to develop and acquire the strength of limb and lung that comes in so handy in gruelling battles out on the oval. In her two outings, early in January, the "Maid" took into camp all of the best babies in training.

Some of the pundits may be interested in the fact that the fleet miss belongs to the Number Seven family, of which the most noted representative is West Australian, great-great-great grandsire of Man o'War. Blood worth having, I'll say.

ASSOCIATION OF VETERAN FIREMEN NINTH BANQUET

Make Merry at Annual Fete With Music and Speeches and Entertainment

At Eagles Hall, on last Saturday evening, the members and officers of the Daly City Veteran Firemens Association assembled for their Ninth Annual Banquet and Frolic. Some 105 members and guests were present.

The festivities were opened by the introduction of the master of ceremonies for the evening, Mr. Arthur J. Bodien, assistant chief of the Daly City Fire Department, by President Schenck of the association.

On assuming charge of the proceedings, Mr. Bodien introduced as the first speaker of the evening Mayor H. H. Smith, who, in a few well chosen words, welcomed to the banquet and to the City of Daly City all guests and visitors and members of Veteran Firemen's Associations and fire departments from other cities.

A. J. Chesney, chief of the Daly City Fire Department and a number of the invited guests and visitors delivered short talks..

Dancing and musical numbers were rendered by members of a vaudeville troupe secured for the occasion. These were greatly enjoyed by the spectators.

Mr. Bernard O'Brien of the Alameda Fire Department, sang several well rendered solos.

Past President Rickman was presented with a gold badge by the master of ceremonies, on behalf of the members of the association.

The roll of departed members was read and during the reading Harry Anderson sang "Good Night."

The feature of the evening (to most of those present) was the serving of an excellent turkey dinner with all the trimmin's 'n everything.

TO OUR READERS

In working up to the achievement we have ever in mind, that of making the Daly City Record the best weekly newspaper in the state of California, we must have the hearty co-operation of the residents of this live community. The editor hears in unison the ejaculation from all readers:

"Why, how can we help?"

Succinctly stated, you can help the editor to accomplish what you must admit to be his highly laudable ambition by bringing or sending news to the Record office, and, what is equally important, bringing or sending it early.

WANT RED LIGHT PLACED ON CAR OF FIRE CHIEF

City Council Complies With Recommendation of Commissioners

The City Council of Daly City met in regular session, Monday evening of this week. The meeting was one of the shortest held in recent months, although a large volume of business was disposed of.

A communication from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company requested permission to open sidewalks and lower its conduits on Mission street to comply with the established grade. Granted with the provision the city engineer supervise the work.

Officials of the Market Street Railway acknowledged receipt of a communication from the council with reference to inadequate car service in this area and asked that a representative be sent to its offices to confer on the matter. As the time suggested for the conference had passed, the city clerk was instructed to request the company to have representatives present at the next regular council meeting.

The Board of Fire Commissioners,

HIGH SCHOOL BOARD TALKS OF NEW BUILDINGS

Construction of Gymnasium And Swimming Pool To Be Main Feature

Construction of a gymnasium and swimming pool for the Jefferson Union High School was one of the major questions before the High School Board of Education at its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening.

The committee appointed by the Daly City Merchants Association to co-operate with the Board of Education was represented by Mr. W. E. Pitschke and Mr. Peterson.

Principal James Ferguson reported that the preliminary plans drawn up by the architects, Resing and McGuinness, had been examined by the Plans and Projects Committee of the San Mateo County Emergency Relief Administration, and had been approved as a desirable project. This, in addition to the expressed approval of the state officials, gives assurance that SERA labor can be secured for the work, provided the school district makes available the necessary funds to furnish the materials needed.

Through the County Emergency Relief Administration the board was informed that such a project may also be included in the new program of the PWA under the federal government. At present there is before

YOUTH STANDS OUT IN NEW FILM

Several New "Finds" Make Debut In Cast Of "The Band Plays On"

In the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Band Plays On," which opens Sunday and Monday, February 17 and 18, at the Daly City Theater, a select group of up-and-coming young screen players go "strictly collegiate" for the theater public.

The swift-moving story reveals the trials and tribulations of college life, its romantic interludes, its lighter moods and its spirit of youth.

The romance is supplied by Robert Young, who has been climbing steadily toward stardom for three years, and Betty Furness, who makes her first appearance as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer leading lady in "The Band Plays On."

Leo Carrillo, who scored so successfully in "Viva Villa!" again gives his delightful Latin accent another airing in the new picture as Angelo, the campus tailor, who becomes the pal and confidante of the college students.

Ted Healy steps forth in a new and different characterization as the "heavy" who walks through life on the shady side of the street.

Also, there are Stuart Erwin, also remembered for his work as the war correspondent in "Viva Villa!" who plays the role of Mike; Russell Hardie, who has been seen in such notable pictures as "Men in White" and "Operator 13"; Preston Foster, who also makes his first appearance under the M-G-M banner as the football coach, Howdy; and Robert Livingston and William Tannen, two newcomers to the screen who recently graduated from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's laboratory school.

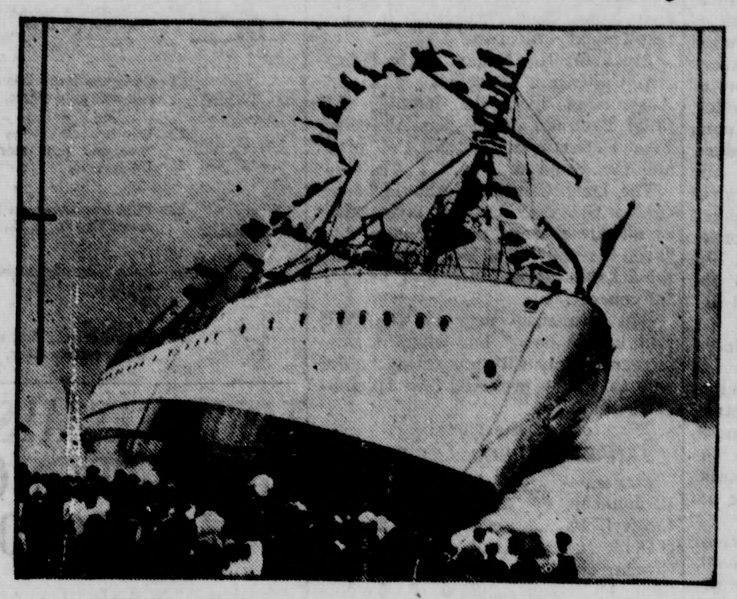
Novel Launching for This Country



A vessel built at Cleveland with PWA funds goes out to sea—in a novel method for American ship yards. The vessel is seen hitting the waters of Lake Erie, sideways, instead of the orthodox method of sliding down the ways stern first. It is the 165-foot Coast Guard cutter Tahoma, now assigned to duty on Lake Erie. Shortly after the launching the Tahoma effected the rescue of a motor ship valued at $300,000.

UNCLE SAM PONDERS ON ALASKA HIGHWAY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Much activity at Washington in regard to varied phases of the development of Alaska is heartening and before many months it may come to pass that the Federal Government has started the ball rolling in that most essential move, the construction of the Alaska highway. Several bills have been introduced in Congress providing for action and hearings so far are encouraging.

Before the appropriations committee of the House of Representatives, Delegate Anthony Dimond, a live wire when it comes to progressive movements in the north, presented a graphic picture of the proposed international road from the main portion of the United States to Fairbanks, Alaska, with the route going through the British Columbia and Yukon Territory.

That roads are an integral part of civilization, in fact, that the decay of civilized society is invariably signalized by the lack of proper arteries or by their neglect, has been pointed out in this column more than once. Right now the subject is being exhaustively discussed in England and it is interesting to note the trend of things. The situation is somewhat different on the other side of the Atlantic but still what is happening there is instructive.

The Manchester Guardian has a highly informative article on arterial roads, which are described as roads primarily designed for through traffic, or a trunk road as it would once have been called. Under ideal regulations, no houses would front on the road, not even houses with long front gardens, and no shops.

It is maintained that dwelling houses along an arterial road increase the danger of accidents, especially to children from the houses. The principal idea is to give a clear passage for through traffic, which would seem to be very desirable in a highway of great length.

Action on the urgent proposition of the building of the Alaska Highway, with an immense increase of the territory in population as a direct consequence, will lead to the solution of that problem confronting us for some time:

"When shall Alaska pass into statehood?"

A trek to the north of millions of the unemployed—at least six million, I am convinced, sturdy youth and men of middle age—will mean the steady growth of Alaska and its almost limitless resources.

In commenting on Governor John W. Troy's recommendation that private capital be given access to timber lands, water power, oil lands, coal lands, and other natural resources, Editor Earle W. Knight of the Alaska Weekly, pertinently says:

"We are not certain that Alaska is ready for full statehood—that it can get along on its own without the assistance of the Federal treasury. We are certain that the Territory should have control over its own resources and be allowed to work its own way toward statehood.

"If ever a nation needed a frontier country toward which the red blood and more hardy capital of the nation might turn it is the United States. It has that frontier and it has it bottled up by conservation rulings the soundness of which has long since been thoroughly exploded.

"It is time that thinking people all over the United States demand action looking toward the throwing open of the natural resources of Alaska — not only throwing them open, but publicizing them and inviting Americans everywhere to get their share. It would not be long before Alaska would be, not one state, but half a dozen states."

Legislation pending in Washington would extend to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation authority to make small loans for prospecting and development work, not exceeding $10,000, and in the aggregate $20,000,000, and in other ways would liberalize terms on which mining loans can be made. The main object of the bills is to help the unemployed to get out into the open spaces, where they can become self-reliant, independent citizens once more.

CHILDREN HOLD FIRE DRILLS IN LOCAL SCHOOLS

Chief And Assistant Find Excellent Progress Being Made In Work

On Monday Chief Chesney, accompanied by Assistant Chief Bodien, held a fire drill in all the schools in Daly City.

The children are responding very well to the drills held by the different principals and teachers.

The Parochial school has just recently started drilling the children and with a few more drills they will soon lower their time of evacuating the building.

The following table shows the number of pupils in each school and the time consumed until the last pupil left the building after the alarm was sounded:

	Pupils	Seconds
Parochial	250	63
General Pershing	350	30
Thornton	40	48
Jefferson	234	42
Woodrow Wilson	415	47
Vista Grande	252	62

The General Pershing P. T. A. and the children taking part in the play, "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," invite you to witness the rendition of this old but ever popular story in play form, lived again by a real little Goldilocks and three live bears.

An evening of merriment is promised to all who attend. And you'll miss a real treat if you don't attend.

So come on! Let's be youngsters once more and join in the laughter and fun!

When? This evening, Friday, February 15, at 8:15, at Jefferson Union High School.

CONGRESSIONAL RESOLUTION ON OUR EXPOSITION

Lake Merced Location Held As Logical One For Holding Fair

Much has been said and written which has evoked discussion regarding the site for the proposed International Exposition in 1938 to commemorate completion of the two great bridges now under construction in the bay area. The majority of the people down the Peninsula seem to be of the opinion that the Lake Merced site would be the most logical one, owing to its natural advantages and accessibility. Several resolutions have been submitted in Congress on this subject, the following being, in the opinion of many Peninsula residents, the most comprehensive yet introduced.

Congressman John J. McGrath has introduced in Congresss, the following joint resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs:

Joint resolution authorizing and requesting the President to invite the countries of the world to participate in the San Francisco Exposition of 1938 at San Francisco, California.

Whereas during the year 1938 there is to be held on the San Francisco Peninsula, California, an International Exposition commemorating the completion of the Golden Gate Bridge and the San Francisco-Oakland Trans-bay Bridge, also known as the "James Rolph, Junior, Memorial Bridge," and the exposition of the development and accomplishment of the Pacific slope area of the United States in agriculture, industry, business, transportation, science, and the social arts, and inspiring more friendly relations among the peoples of the world; and

Whereas the said exposition by virtue of its scope and aims deserves the encouragement and support of the Government of the United States of America; Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That whenever satisfactory financial arrangements for the holding of the exposition have been made, the President of the United States be, and hereby is, authorized and respectfully requested by proclamation or in such other manner as he may deem proper to invite all foreign nations and countries to attend and participate in such proposed exposition.

No other location yet mentioned, in our opinion, equals that of the Lake Merced site. It has the advantages of all natural facilities, such as water, rolling hills, scenery, expanse and everything that goes toward making it an ideal site for an International Exposition. Its location also excels all others in the matter of accessibility on account of transportation facilities and the easy avenues of approach from all directions of the compass.

GIRLS VIE FOR STATE HONORS IN ESSAY CONTEST

Last Year's Winner Must Abdicate In Favor Of This Term Student

A 1935 high school essay champion is to be crowned in California!

Miss Eleanor Roberta Bean of Oakland, 1934 state title winner, must yield her throne to another student of this state who will be selected within the next three months.

Full details of a contest, which again will be open to high school students enrolled in home economics courses, has just been received by teachers of this city. The contest not only is state-wide but national in scope, it is said. It is sponsored by the livestock and meat industry through its organization, the National Live Stock and Meat Board. The topics for essays will deal with phases of the subject of meat.

University scholarships will be the goal of students who enter. They will be given the opportunity to compete against girls in other states for sectional and national honors. Last year the national championship went to Miss Anne Oczkewecz of Everett, Washington.

Prominent home economics authorities will select the winners, according to the contest announcement. In a similar event last year, Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the bureau of home economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. was chairman of the judging committee.

MAJORS AID FUND AND BAND PLAYS

(By Al Gould)

The feature contest of the games Sunday at the Seal Sadium, staged by the Northern California Baseball Manager's Association, so that the sand lot and semi-pro baseball players may receive the very best of hospitalization and aid possible, was ushered in with much ceremony and amid the strains of music furnished by our own local band, bedecked in their resplendent uniforms.

President Jim Nealon of the Northern California Baseball Manager's Association took the mound, with Chief Brennan of the San Francisco Fire Department behind the plate, and the game was on.

The Daly City Band should be accorded the very best of cooperation by all our citizens, as they sure went "over the top" in a big way by their remarkable appearance and wonderful concert.

San Francisco may be the "city that knows how," but when it came to music, Daly City answered the call and as usual produced the splendor of the occasion.

LINCOLN ESSAYS BY STUDENTS OF HIGH SCHOOL

LINCOLN AND SLAVERY

(By Frances Koch)

It was a serious condition of affairs that confronted Abraham Lincoln when he was sworn into office on March 4, 1861.

As well as being threatened with civil war, Lincoln was also faced with the problem of slavery. He was unable to make up his mind as to the best way to settle the slave problem, so he trusted in God to make it up for him and after several months he was determined to set the slaves free.

Washington was in a dangerous position when Virginia joined the confederacy in May, 1862, so Lincoln called a conference of representatives of the border states and asked them to consider gradual emancipation. The slaveholders listened to his message, and a short time afterwards gradual abolition bills were brought in to be considered. Congress in a series of Confiscation Acts declared that all negroes employed as workers on forts or trenches, or in the transportation of stores of ammunition should be liberated; that slaves who escaped into the Union lines should not be returned; and that all slaves in places conquered and held by the Union armies should be free. In a message to Congress March 6, 1862, Lincoln recommended that a law be passed pledging the United States government to co-operate with any state in emancipation of its slaves by compensating the owners of the slaves for their loss, but he got little support for either his cabinet or congress. In the mid-summer of 1862 he sorrowfully abandoned his plan for compensated emancipation.

The President began to receive letters from our foreign ministers that he could not expect the sympathy of Europe if it were not made clear that the war was for the extermination of slavery.

August 22, 1862, Lincoln wrote a letter to Horace Greeley, editor of the New York Tribune, saying: "My paramount object in this struggle is to save the Union. If I could save the Union without freeing the slaves I would do so. If I could save the Union and free only a few slaves I would do that;" but he did not say what he knew that the Union could not be saved with slavery.

Shortly after his address on July 12, to the representatives of the border states, Lincoln told Secretary of War, Gideon Welles, and Secretary of State, Seward, that he had concluded to free the slaves by proclamation.

At the cabinet meeting of July 22, 1862, President Lincoln announced his intention of declaring free, on the first of the following January, the slaves of all people then in rebellion against the United States. When Lincoln had finished his address he was congratulated by Edwin Stanton, Secretary of War after Simon Cameron, Salmon Chase, secretary of the treasury, and Attorney General Edwin Bates, for the wisdom of his decision, but Montgomery Blair, postmaster general, felt it would interfere with the fall election. Secretary Seward felt that such a proclamation would come with better force after a Union victory, so Lincoln postponed the announcement until McClellan had repulsed Lee's invasion of Maryland at Antieton, August 17, 1862.

Lincoln wrote the Emancipation Proclamation on Sunday morning, September 21, and called his cabinet together September 22, to hear it. He said he planned to issue his proclamation when the rebel army should be driven out of Fredericksburg. The proclamation read: ".....on the first day of January in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all persons held as slaves in any state or designated part of a state, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States, shall be then, thence forward and forever free."

As the closing lines Secretary Chase wrote:

".....and upon this act, sincerely belived to be an act of justice warranted by the Constitution upon military necessity, I invoke the considerate judgment of mankind and the gracious favor of Almighty God."

(Ed. Note)—Next week as essay on "Lincoln the Man," by Helen Bull, will be printed. This essay was awarded honorable mention in the contest.

HIGH SCHOOL BOARD TALKS OF NEW BUILDINGS

Congress a bill to provide $4,880,000,000 for public works, and the administration is known to be favorable to public schools projects. Principal Ferguson reported that as a means of making doubly sure of securing the necessary government assistance, the project had also been listed in the survey of possible public improvements now being made by the federal government. This survey, is to be the basis upon which the public works program is to be worked out.

Mr. Pitschke, speaking as a representative of the Merchants Association, expressed himself as being enthusiastically in favor of the project. "A gymnasium and swimming pool at Jefferson Union High School," he said, "is needed to carry out the educational program of the boys and girls attending the school. But it is needed also to furnish recreation for the young people who are out of school and for adults. It will solve a great community problem to have such a social center for the people of the Jefferson Union High School District."

A similar sentiment was expressed by Mr. Peterson and also by all of the trustees present—Chairman Gehringer, Mrs. Lila Brown, Mrs. Stella Jensen, and Dr. Callsen.

The Board of Trustees will proceed further with the plans as soon as more information is received from the federal authorities.

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH
BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

REGARDING RHEUMATISM

You will find rheumatic persons saying that they can tell when a storm or cold weather is coming because they can feel it in their bones or in their joints; and you will hear other persons laughing at the idea that weather can affect rheumatism.

But the rheumatic persons are right. Weather does affect them.

Students of preventive medicine are beginning to consider man and his environment as one organic whole and are studying some of our diseases from this standpoint. We have almost exhausted the field of bacteriology trying to find germs as the cause of disease. Recent work tends to show that the skin is an important factor in rheumatism.

The skin is not just a covering mantle or protective cloak of the body. It is a vast organ concerned with the sense of feel and touch. It secretes sweat and oily substances. It also excretes certain things from the body.

We are finding that the protective action of the skin can be extended to guarding us against invasion by germs around us. The action of sunlight and ultra-violet light on the skin is well known to the layman.

We know that the skin can be changed by the temperature of the air, by the humidity of the air, and also by changes in barometric pressure. The skin can be thought of as a big receptor organ that receives from the outside world messages of all kinds and transmits these to the internal organs, through blood and nerve channels.

The capillary blood channels in the skin are thought by many authorities to be involved in rheumatism. It must not be forgotten that man's skin is an important organ in maintaining body temperature. It can eliminate heat in the summer time, which is really a refrigeration function. During the winter our skin acts as a covering layer to prevent the loss of heat. In the summer there is an increased flow of blood through the skin, and in the winter there is a decreased flow.

The patient suffering from rheumatism does not have a proper control of the blood supply of the skin and the secretion of sweat. There is a tendency toward spasmodic contraction of the capillaries and at times these capillaries become engorged with blood. In other words, there is an instability in the blood vessels, controlling system.

We just mentioned that the skin is an important organ in controlling body temperature. The rheumatic individual undergoes wide fluctuations in skin temperature. There is oftentimes a subnormal temperature of the skin. This influences the metabolism of the body in that we lose the heat-regulatory function of the skin that is so important for our well-being. When the temperature of the cells within the body changes there is a change in the chemical products of these cells, and many authorities now think that this explains in part the development of pain in the muscles and joints.

This is a new conception of rheumatism and helps explain some phases of the disease better than the older bacteriological theory that was difficult to substantiate in many instances. The abnormal sensitiveness to changes in weather that are experienced by all rheumatics is due to the fact that these people do not have the proper skin function. The circulation of the skin is changed as a result of the alterations in temperature, humidity and barometric pressure in such a manner that internal disturbances take place leading to the development of pain in certain areas of the body.

It is well known that rheumatic pains can develop as a result of hot temperature environments as well as cold. Over exertion and fatigue followed by chilling of the body are also common factors. Much has been said of cold damp air causing rheumatism. So long as the skin function is normal, muscle or joint pains will not develop because of exposure to damp and chilly conditions. Damp cold air causes the body to lose heat rapidly if the blood vessels of the skin do not react promptly, by diminishing the blood supply to the skin. Hence the body does not become cooler because we produce the same amount of heat and we lose much less heat. When the skin function is abnormal this does not occur and consequently the rheumatic develops pains.

The proper treatment for rheumatism is to aid the skin by artificial means to re-establish a good circulatory system. This is the reason that a hot water bottle placed on the skin close to the area of pain will often stop the discomfort. The proper treatment is an organized medical plan of various types of physical therapy, such as light treatment, heat treatments, massage, baths, all of which aid the skin to re-establish its proper circulation.

We all live under the same weather conditions. Due to a lack of control of his skin, the rheumatic cannot adjust himself. The rest of us adjust ourselves perfectly and are in no way incapacitated by such weather changes. The rheumatic speaks very truly when he says he can feel weather changes.

CALIFORNIA News of the Week

Former President Herbert Hoover left his Palo Alto retreat recently to go to New York as a director of a large insurance company. He will attend his first directors' meeting.

The first annual mid-year commencement and the 26th anniversary of the school's founding were celebrated jointly by Redlands University, February 12. This was the first year that the number of mid-year graduates warranted a special service. Twenty-one graduated.

California may look forward to a gold mining boom, declared mining experts, due to congressional authorization granting the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to miners on partially developed property. The bill empowers the RFC to make loans in amounts not exceeding $20,000 to an individual property.

An increase of 191.2 per cent in Sacramento's bank debits for the week ending February 2 over the corresponding period in 1933, marks the largest gain in California's "fastest recovering" city for several weeks. The Capital's nearest rival in amount of money turnover was San Francisco, showing an increase of 45.3 per cent.

Discussing the cost of collecting taxes in this state, Controller Ray L. Riley declared that to gain a dollar net to the state, the taxpayer must pay $1.42. To gain a dollar net from truck taxes costs $1.61. The Board of Equalization, of which Riley is chairman, is attempting to work out a plan to save both the taxpayer and the state money.

That the State Board of Equalization is "cracking down" on liquor law violators is testified by the closing of a Fresno brewery and six large cafes in San Francisco. The brewery was convicted of engaging in retail business while a manufacturer. Most of the six cafes were alleged to have plied young girls with drinks.

Lazarus IV, officially dead four and and a half months ago, is learning to run. At meal time he is just another average dog, growling and showing his teeth at any intrusion to his feast of dog biscuits. This dog was the second one "killed" by Dr. Robert E. Cornish, Berkeley chemist. The first animal never did fully recover, being still blind and barely able to stand.

Two museums in two different parts of the state are being erected to preserve two different civilizations which have existed in California. Near Corona, Riverside County, is being assembled a museum containing the relics of the prehistoric tribes which inhabited the Southwest long ago. At Marysville, Yuba County, SERA workers will soon start construction of a museum to house relice of California's gold days.

Wiping his legislative slate clean, Governor Merriam has signed the last four measures waiting his official attention. The mortgage moratorium act, to which he affixed his signature recently, has first been used by Virginia Zaffaroni of San Francisco, who filed petition for review in superior court to prevent sale under foreclosure of property secured by a $600 trust deed on which she has defaulted payments.

Six motorists went to jail recently in Los Angeles' war on auto deaths, to serve maximum sentences. Eight others escaped jail by accepting the alternative of having their automobiles impounded under a new plan adopted by municipal court judges. The first to lose his car and operator's license under the new policy was Arthur Johnson, charged with reckless and hit-run driving. He spent five days in jail, lost his operator's license for 30 days and his car for 60 days.

The Assembly committee, appointed at the last legislative session to investigate the conduct and management of the State Bar, lawyers' governing body in California, has started operations, inquiring into whether the organization had been used for political purposes. Joseph J. Webb, first president and one of the organizers of the State Bar, said that he "knew of no time when the State Bar governors, as such, had supported any candidates for office."

For two or three days just prior to their New Year's celebration, San Francisco's Chinatown was virtually under martial law, with police stationed at every street corner. This was because of a threatened tong war, due to a controversy between the Hop Sing and Four Families groups over a bartered bride. The father of the bride who was alleged to have sold her for $1800, was taken into custody by authorities. Peace was restored before any outbreak occurred.

California's Boy Scouts, in conjunction with over a million of their brethren throughout the country, celebrated the 25th birthday of the founding of that organization. During Boy Scout Week the anniversary parades and rallies were held throughout the state.

A healthy recovery for California is predicted by Dr. J. D. Dunshee, state department of public health head. He points out that deaths in this state decreased in 1934 as compared with 1933, and that both the birth and marriage rate showed an increase.

SCENTED "GAS"

Fastidious motorists can now fill the tanks of their cars with scented petrol. A process has been developed whereby it is possible to perfume petrol, and it may soon be a delight to trail a motorist as the exhaust pipe of his car emits violet, lilac, or possibly attar of roses. A patent has been granted for a process which eliminates the unpleasant smells from the exhaust gases of internal-combusion engines. These gases can be given an agreeable odor by adding to each gallon of petrol four grammes of an artificial musk compounds, which it is claimed has the property of resisting combustion in the engines of motor cars and converting the unpleasant smell of exhausted gas and half-burned oil into a delightful odor.—London Tit-Bits.

SUBSTANTIAL GOLD REVIVAL NEAR ROSSLAND

Fifty-Eight Leases "On The Hill" Bring Along New Era Of Mining

(Sidney Norman in Vancouver Sun)

The old-timer who visits Rossland these days will experience one of the pleasant thrills of his life—something missing since the good old days, when the mountain city was the best mining camp in the West, boasting its 10,000 cosmopolitan people.

That was a hard blow. Gradusame old-timer had happened to visit the camp three or four years ago and had thus seen for himself the deplorable condition of stagnation that followed complete suspension of operations "on the hill" about ten years ago.

Tha tatwas a hard blow. Gradually, population dwindled away, to as low as 2000, with a great part of those who remained dependents of men employed in the great smelting works seven miles down the mountain at Trail.

In the early months of last year things reached a crucial state, and it looked as if the old town would fold up, except as a residential escape from smelter fumes and the occasional rendezvous of tourists from across the line.

A few of the old pioneer miners held on, certain that some day the mines would be reopened because, as they knew, there was lots of ore there yet.

Gold price was creeping up and as it ascended, these old timers poked around in the upper levels of the silent mines or picked over the old dumps.

They learned that at prevailing prices there was profit in leasing, even if the mines might not be economically workable upon the lavish scale of old.

New Era Dawns

May,1933, the dawn of a new era broke in the history of the old town, which was born back in 1890. In that month Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company, which owns all the principal mines "on the hill," announced that it would lease the upper levels of the Le Roi, Le Roi No. 2 War Eagle, Centre Star, Iron Mask, Columbia and Kootenay, and others where leasers could show that ore could be taken out at a profit.

Old employees of the company were to have preference; in fact, practically all leases since granted have been confined to that category and Rossland wishes it distinctly understood that it intends to use its individual and collective influence to keep things that way. In other words, there is plenty of available labor there now. It is argued that those who had stuck by the ship are entitled to a little consideration now.

Slowly at first, the new era dawned, as one by one the leases got under way, all handicapped by lack of funds. Shipments had to go forward before much expension could take place. Home-made devices of all kinds took the place of modern machinery.

Any old contraption went, so long as the ore could be put on the cars and sent off to Trail. There was lots of pent-up energy in camp and strenuous work was a relief after the stagnation of years.

Shipments in 1933

From May 15 to the end of 1933, shipments reached 23,368,010 pounds, or 11,684 tons, with average gold settlement price of $28 an ounce. The average tenor was conservatively about .6 oz. gold, so that the total production for the year reached approximately $200,000.

After deduction of 20 per cent royalty and freight treatment charges, a very respectable sum was left for the leasers. In fact, several of the best leases made neat little stakes.

Leases have been worked at accelerated pace during the present year and many new leasers entered the field to try their luck. At the present time, 58 leases are being worked, 51 of them upon mines of Consolidated Smelters.

Subleases upon dumps probably increased that number considerably during the summer months, but the mantle of white has again descended upon the mountain town and covered up the stark ugliness of the enormous dumps, the old abandoned headframes and the flapping tin roofs. Every effort of the underground leasers is being put forth to make work possible throughout the long winter season.

Enthusiastic Rosslanders claim that 300 men are now at work in profitable occupation, but that may be a little above the mark. At any rate, over 200 are so employed an dit has made all the difference in the world. Activity has succeeded apathy; hope taken the place of despair. The relief rolls have been deserted and Rossland once more has her head up.

Fire had a hand in cleaning up the old dilapidated main street—Columbia avenue—along the crowded sidewalks of which miner and capitalist rubbed albows in the old halcyon days.

Two whole blocks were wiped out east of the old Allan hotel, which still stands as a landmark of happy days. By actual count about a dozen new houses were being built a few weeks ago and there is not a vacant place anywhere.

Up till October 15 of this year, the various leases had produced 49,019,-750 pounds, or 24,510 tons of ore averaging around .6 oz. gold, settled for at an average price of $32 an ounce.

In other words, value of lease ore was approximately $500,000, or at the rate of over $50,000 for each month of the year, a very respectable income for a town that has left hard luck behind and is again to the front in the creation of real, new wealth.

Since May 15, 1933, the total production has been close to $700,000 and, if maintained at present rate from October 15 to the end of the year, the total for 1934 alone will approximate $600,000, placing Rossland among the greatest gold-producers in the province.

Population Up

All this activity has led to a very appreciable increase in population. At the last census, in 1932, the number of inhabitants was placed at 2856, and is now believed that it is anywhere from 3500 to 3800, depending largely upon the exuberence of the authority questioned.

The entire production "on the hill" has come from above No. 2 adit level of Centre Star mine, which is about 30 feet below the Black Bear tunnel and drains the underground workings of the Le Roi, Centre Star, Iron Mask, War Eagle and Josie mines to that level, giving approximately 400 feet of depth on the vein system at the deepest point.

There have been rumors that Consolidated Smelters had decided to put the big pumps to work once more to drain another few hundred feet for leasing purposes, but from the best of sources it has been ascertained that the thought was son to the wish. There will be nothing of that kind, at least for a while yet.

Houses In Demand

During the first nine months of this year Rossland building permits reached well over $35,000. Three blocks of Columbia avenue, with full intersections on the cross streets, have been paved.

One of the most complete picture show houses in the interior—the Capitol—has been built at a cost of around $40,000. Daily train service, connecting with the Kettle Valley line, is still maintained. Father Pat's monument has been moved back to the property line just east of the Allan Hotel.

On O. K. Mountain

Since I.X.L. made a sensation by production of very high grade ore back in 1921, it has been worked during about seven years of the intervening time, with a production record of $454,000. One shipment of two tons was worth $6151 per ton.

Underground development has reached a total of about 3700 feet, so that each foot of ground opened has been worth no less than $122, won from a small vein, often no more than a seam, but exceedingly rich. That is a record seldom exceeded in this province and reminiscent of the performance of such well known mines as Original Sixteen to One, in Sierra County, California.

Success of the sensational kind at I.X.L. led to much gophering around in other properties of the immediate vicinity and leases are now being worked at Golden Drip, Midnight, O. K. and a few other properties with varying measures of success.

Electric power was provided by West Kootenay Power & Light Co., in 1932 and progress has since been more rapid, with promise of the addition of one or more regular producers of high grade.

On the other side of Sophia Mountain, on the highway to Grand Forks, the old Velvet mine is being operated by Seattle parties with a crew of 30 men. Shipments have been going forward to Tacoma smelter, until recently, when flotation equipment was added to the mill and production will henceforth be in the form of concentrate.

Question: What is the difference between black tea and green tea?

Answer: It is a somewhat prevalent idea that black tea and green tea are produced by two different varieties of plant, but the difference is wholly a matter of preparation. The green variety is what makers call unfermented tea, and the black is fermented. Fermentation, in this instance, means about the same as oxidization—the leaves remain in the open air from twenty to thirty hours. In the case of fermented tea, certain oxidizing ferments in the leaf are permitted to remain in it. These ferments work chemical changes in the leaf that give it its black color. In case of unfermented tea, the leaves are placed in a firing machine shortly after they are plucked, which prevents fermentation by closing the pores.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Soul" will be the subject of the Lesson - Sermon, Sunday, February 17, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Golden Text will be: "Set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord your God" (I Chronicles 22:19). Other Bible citations will include: "Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat! . . . My foot hath held his steps, his way have I kept, and not declined. Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food. But he is in one mind, and who can turn him? and what his soul desireth, even that he doeth" (Job 23: 3, 11-13).

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine Mind maintains all identities, from a blade of grass to a star, as distinct and eternal. The questions are: What are God's identities? What is Soul? Does life or soul exist in the thing formed? Nothing is real and eternal,—nothing is Spirit,—but God and His idea" (pp. 70, 71).

PAY UP NOW OR PAY DOUBLE LATER

This warning today was given tardy motor vehicle owners who have not yet applied for 1935 license plates by Russell Bevans, registrar of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

All who have not filed an application for new plates by midnight of February 14th will be required to pay a penalty equal to the amount of the fee.

In the case of the ordinary passenger car this will mean that the fee will be $6 instead of $3. For commercial vehicles the fee will be much greater.

It is now illegal to operate a vehicle without the new plates unless an application has been filed.

Bevans announced traffic officers would be instructed within a short time to pick up all cars displaying 1934 license plates.

Use Correct Oil

The belief that heavy oil will thin out to about the right consistency after the motor has run a while is a mistaken one, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

The lubricating qualities of good oil are not materially affected by running. Hence it is wise to use only the grade of oil recommended by the car manufacturer and replace it with a fresh supply at proper intervals.

BUSINESS TAKES OPTIMISTIC VIEW

The upward trend of business during the first weeks of the year would seem to justify the optimism which marked the close of 1934.

This continued optimism, finding from many sources, strengthened the belief that the forces of recovery are now definitely in the ascendant. It is a happy augury that business continues to maintain a cooperative spirit toward Government efforts to cope with the depression, a spirit often voiced by leaders of trade and industry in the late months of 1934 and which found reiteration almost to the extent of unanimity.

Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who has many times counseled cooperation in governmental activities, has again declared himself unequivocally an optimist in his views of the future. Mr. Harriman went to Pittsburgh to address the Chamber of Commerce. In a speech which breathed optimism, he took occasion to refute charges of "regimentation," "dictatorships," and other labels attached to Government activities.

"The rank and file of American citizens are still rugged individualists, but they had their fill of ruthless individualism," Mr. Harriman told his audience. Some measure of social control is imperative to maintain and insure orderly development, and it follows that this control can best be exercised by the Government."

To justify his optimism Mr. Harriman pointed to a 15 percent increase in retail sales last year, a $1,500,000 increase in farm income, the doubling of shipments from Pennsylvania to southern consumers, the increase in dividend payments. He recalled that the United States Steel Corporation plans to spend $45,000,000 in plant improvements and that the motor industry expects its biggest year since 1930 as signs that the country is just now starting on the new era of better times.

Since 1933 the trend of business has been slowly but steadily upward, Mr. Harriman told the Pittsburgh business men.

"In March 1933 the number of the unemployed was between 12 and 13 million," he said. "At the beginning of 1934 it was about 9,000,000, and at the opening of the present year about 7,000,000. This indicates a steady and healthy increase in employment but it also leaves no doubt of the seriousness of unemployment at the present time.

"It would indeed be dangerous to prophesy the exact time of the final upswing of this depression, but I believe there is distinct evidence that the demand for durable goods will become marked during the present calendar year.

"I am basing my belief for better business not primarily on what the administration has done or has not done, but upon immutable economic laws which indicate that great depressions follow rather definite phases of fall, readjustment, and recovery.

"There are clouds on the horizon. There are many business problems still to be solved. There are many men still out of work. There are many debts still to be paid. But the signs of the times are propitious, and if Government and business are each patient with the impatience of the other, there is ground for real optimism."

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

NIRB Advisory Council Would Prohibit Scrip Payments: Solution of the scrip problem by prohibiting the use of scrip in payment of wages has been recommended by the NRA Advisory Council to the National Industrial Recovery Board. The recommendation is now before the board, and an early announcement of policy is anticipated.

The code for the retail trade includes provisions strictly regulating the use of scrip and the operation of company stores. These provisions were stayed and have continued inoperative. A committee of three, appointed by the NRA, studied the scrip problem and submitted a report with recommendations on November 16, 1934.

Both the Advisory Council and the committee found that the best approach to the scrip problem was through codes of industries making payment of wages in scrip, as has been done in the code for the bituminous coal industry.

The Advisory Council suggested provisions for inclusion in codes for scrip-issuing industries, naming the most important needing such action."

The recommendations include, in addition to rules for wage payments in cashier negotiable checks and provisions for cashing them at face value, exemption of wages from deductions except voluntary payments for pensions, insurance, or sick benefits, or those required by state law. Further recommendations are that no employer shall withhold wages, accept rebates, or require that employees trade at a specified store or rent a specified house.

General Uptrend Continues in Industrial Divisions: Persistence of the uptrend in industrial divisions continue to maintain unquestioned leadership in the progress now being recorded.

Subzero temperatures in so many parts of the country has reduced almost to depletion the few remaining offerings of winter merchandise.

Wholesale volume is being bolstered by larger spring commitments than last year.

Dun & Bradstreet, in their weekly review of the week, thus summarize the currant situation in the industrial, wholesale, and retail fields.

The review states: "Rarely has been an opening month of any year so crowded with occurrences which can be interpreted as a forerunner of constructive developments, and one of the most encouraging features of the present expand movements is that more branches of activity have fallen within its inclusiveness."

The review cites many encouraging developments.

Employment totals in many industrial divisions are in excess of any comparative figures since 1930.

Retail sales throughout the nation ran from 12 to 20 percent above last year.

Factory employment increased and industrial operations ranged 20 to 40 percent higher than in the corresponding 1933 week.

1934 Bank Failures Fewest Since 1920: Long strides toward the rehabilitation of America's banking structure since the crisis in March 1933 were reported in the monthly bulletin of the Federal Reserve Board.

Due to Federal activities, the board reported that the number of unlicensed banks, or banks which had not obtained licenses to reopen, had been reduced from more than 4500 to less than 200 at the end of December.

Banking suspensions in 1934 were reported fewer than in any similar period since 1920. The year's failures comprised 56 institutions, with deposits of $37,000,000. Only one of these, with deposits of only $40,000, was a member of the Federal Reserve system.

AQUEDUCT DAY IS TO BE CELEBRATED

Gigantic water and power development projects, costing more than $400,000,000,000 now under way in the West, will be recognized during Aqueduct Day, June 22, at the California Pacific Inernational Exposition, opening in San Diego, May 29.

Thirty or more teams of expert drillers will contest on Aqueduct Day for the world's record in setting up drills, boring a four foot hole through a 25 ton boulder and dismantling their implements. Elimination contests are now being conducted by aqueduct and dam camps to insure that only the most expert drillers will compete in this event.

It is estimated that more than 7000 men are now employed on various developement projects in the West.

MOTORIST BODY IS AGAINST STATE HIGHWAY PLAN

States Road Work Taken Over From Counties Has Been Inadequate

Proposed legislation taking all county roads into the state highway system is opposed by the California State Automobile Association as "an unworkable and unnecessary experiment."

Holding that the practical limit of centralized state authority over financing and administering highway work has already been reached, the board of directors of the motorists organization through its executive committee announced strong disapproval of the plan, which would transfer to the state an additional 65,000 miles of county roads and abolish all local control.

"The limit of centralization compatible with the best interests of the state and the counties was just about reached," the announcement declared, "when 6700 miles of important county roads and through routes in cities were added to the state highway system at the last session of the Legislature. So far little more than strictly essential maintenance work has been done by the state on these newly added roads."

Terming the proposed legislation a radical experiment which offers no assurance of greater efficiency or economy in the spending of money contributed by motorists for road purposes, the association statement emphasized that the existing method has given California one of the finest highway systems in the nation.

"The state now has under its jurisdiction 13,624 miles of highways and 985 miles of through route streets in cities, embracing all important motor travel arteries in California," the statement continued. "There remain under the jurisdiction of county boards of supervisors some 65,000 miles of roads which are of little more than local importance.

"From the time the state highway system was first conceived, constant additions have been made to it with the idea that the state should ultimately be responsible for all highways that are of importance to the state as a whole, or which are intercounty in character. With few possible exceptions, the state now has control over all such roads.

"The share of gasoline tax and motor vehicle fee money which goes to the counties should not be considered as state aid to county roads. The money really belongs to the counties in the first instance, the state acting simply as a collection agency. Supervisors are responsible to the people of their county, who can proceed in various ways if they feel there is inefficiency or waste in the use of road funds. If the people of a county want roads of a higher standard than is possible with gasoline tax money, they are privileged to tax themselves for that purpose. That is the business of the people of the county and not of the state as a whole.

"The proposed legislation would eliminate all refunds to the counties and vest in the California Highway Commission the allocation of some $44,000,000 per year. The commission has broad discretionary powers, limited only by certain restrictions of the Breed Allocation Act. The authority for the allocation of this vast expenditure would be concentrated in the hands of the five commissioners, who are non-salaried appointive officials, serving at the pleasure of the governor.

"Reference has been made to political patronage of supervisors. It would appear that wherever officials have the allocating and spending of money there could always be political patronage.

"It has taken years to develop our su cessful plan of highway financing in California. There now appears to exist a generally satisfactory balance between state control and the proper functions of local authorities.'

Arthur H. Breed, president of the Automobile Association and former state senator, recognized as an authority on highway legislation, said:

"California today has the finest system of highways of any state and a plan of financing and method of administration which are generally regarded as models of their kind. The automobile association feels that, for the present at least, there should be no tinkering with this successful mechanism. We should not experiment with something new when what we have is working out so well. There are highway functions which, by their nature, should be carried on by the local state, but there are also road problems of such a peculiarly local nature that they should be handled by local authorities."

Paint Harms Radiator

Paint should not be applied to the radiator core, because it is ordinarily too heavy and has a tendency to retard air passage, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Instead of paint a mixture of lamp black and turpentine (one pint of turpentine to two ounces of lamp black) can be used without harmful results.

EXTEND INVITATION TO NAVAL ARMADAS

The prospect of a visit to the Pacific Coast of vessels of thirty foreign navies this spring was seen in the announcement of the local headquarters of the California Pacific International Exposition, opening in San Diego, May 29.

Invitations have been extended the Washington embassies. Replies already received indicate that the German training ship "Shulschiff Deutschland" and the training ships of the Swedish and Norwegian armadas will probably attend.

The port of San Diego, setting of America's 1935 exposition, has figured prominently in maritime history since that day in 1542 when the Spanish navigator, Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, discovered San Diego Bay. It is the third greatest natural harbor on the Pacific Coast and the southernmost naval base of any consequence north of the Panama Canal.

LONGEST RAIL BRIDGE

A British firm of engineers recently completed building the longest railway bridge in the world. It is the Lower Zambesi bridge, erected to provide uninterrupted railway communication between Beira and Lake Nyasa, in East Africa, and is 11,650 feet, or nearly two miles and a quarter, in length. There are six approach spans and 33 main spans, the latter being supported by concrete piers sunk in the bed of the river, or on mass concrete bases founded on the rock at the river bank. Hell Gate bridge, in New York is nearly 2,000 feet longer than the Lower Zambesi bridge, but 10,818 feet of this is over land and only a total of 2,735 feet is over three separate branches of the East river, whereas the entire length of the Lower Zambesi bridge is over the water during the winter season.

The "liquid test"

...It ENDS bowel worries for many people

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change. If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. Ask your doctor about this! (Doctors use liquid laxatives.) You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a most dependable liquid laxative, at any drug store.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Lanny visits her and Nance persuades her to smuggle out a letter which a confederate of Nance steals. Nance escapes, although shot, by swimming to a speed-boat manned by friends, and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment.

"Those cops at your house will stick around, Lanny, and when you return they'll want to know where you've been. What are you going to tell them?"

"Tell them nothing. Let those two cops sit in their car in front of my house all night and watch it. What do I care? At least they'll keep burglars away. And when finally they do round me up and waltz me down to central station to be questioned, you'll do the questioning, will you not?"

"Lanny," said Dan McNamara, "if you were a man and on the force I'd make you a detective sergeant. You're a bear-cat, that's what you are. But you smuggled that letter out of San Quentin for Nance and turned it over to Sapphire Susie!"

"Indeed! Well, let me tell you, Dan McNamara, that I'm a respectable woman and I never associate, if I know it, with ladies known to the police by such names."

"Maybe you didn't know it, but you gave Sapphire Susie a lift in your car from the main gate at San Quentin down to Greenbrae. The guard remembers seeing her hanging around the main gate, as if she was waiting for somebody; later she got into a coupe with a middle-aged lady, who looked so respectable he took another look at the pass she had just surrendered to him and remembers that the name on the pass was yours. The pass entitled you to visit Nance Belden. Guards may not remember such incidents until something happens. Then they're fast on their feet, Lanny."

"And who, if you please, is Sapphire Susie?"

"She's did a stretch at San Quentin for blackmail. She was discharged a week before you visited Nance, and before Susie left the Big House, Nance fixed it with her to lend a helping hand. Apparently Nance didn't want to confide the minute details of her plan of escape to Susie. Susie's a swell looker but a little bit dumb—she levied blackmail through the mail, understand, and signed her name, instead of hiring a smart shyster lawyer. So Nance decided to send her written instructions out by you, and Susie agreed to pick you up, pinch the letter and deliver it."

"Dan, I assure you I wasn't in any plot to effect a prison delivery. If I'd thought for an instant I was doing anything wrong—why, Nance told me to read her letter and if I disapproved of its contents to destroy it. I didn't see any harm in that."

"You violated the rules of the prison and you could be punished for it by a term in that same prison."

"I'm a respectable woman—"

"That gets you nowhere. I was a respectable chief of police once—and now look at me. If your part in this leaks out you can only be punished—and you can't be convicted unless you talk in your sleep. If my part in this should leak out I'll be punished and disgraced and thrown out of the best job I've ever had. However—" he raised his glass to her—"mud in your eye, Lanny."

"Happy days, Dan, you gorgeous softy."

The doorbell rang, Dan opened it and Doctor Burt stepped in. He paused in amazement at sight of Lanny, glass in hand; she motioned him with it down the hall. "First door at the end, Stevie. You'll find your patient there."

"That girl with the dissociated personality, Nance Belden, escaped from San Quentin late this afternoon, Chief," Stephen began, and handed the latter a newspaper. "Big story. First woman to escape from San Quentin." He gazed severely upon Lanny. "What are you doing here, Lanny?"

"All h—l to pay, Stevie dear, and no pitch hot. That Belden girl is here with a bullet hole in her shoulder; she's suffering from shock and submersion and chill and loss of blood and she's cold as a penguin's tail. I've given her a stiff noggin of Dan's terrible booze and a fortieth of a grain of strychnin and an alcohol rub. She's sleeping. Did you bring those hot-water bottles?"

"Yes," he said humbly, indicating a bag he carried. Lanny fell upon the bag, and retired to the kitchen to fill the hotwater bottles and tuck them in alongside her child patient. "Lucky if she doesn't develop pneumonia, Stevie."

Doctor Burt stood looking down at the sleeping Nance. "Out of the warden's arms and straight into yours. You guessed she'd call on Lanny, eh. Dan, you're an old fox."

"No, Doc, I'm not. A fox has brains."

"He's a lamb, Stevie, just a big ram lamb."

While Lanny was assisting Doctor Burt in dressing Nance Belden's wound, Dan McNamara sat in his plain little living room and read the story of her escape from San Quentin. It appeared that throughout all of Sunday afternoon two men, in a motor boat, had been anchored in the cove off San Quentin apparently fishing for striped bass, which abound at this particular point in San Francisco bay. There were other boats anchored there also—eight in all. The guard at the entrance to the women's quarters had observed them, until, about four-thirty p. m., just before locking-up time a guard in one of the lookout towers on the hill had telephoned him that a boat had approached close to the shore.

The guard had thereupon stepped out of his kiosk and around to the rear of it, which faced toward the beach, less than thirty feet distant. He had shouted at the men in the boat and warned them to be off, that they were not permitted to approach that close, that they were within the deadline. To this the men replied that they couldn't help it; that their motor had gone dead and that the tide had set them in; that they were trying to make repairs and would be off as soon as they could.

While the guard was in the rear of his station, engaged in this conversation, Nance Belden had approached the gate, kicked off her shoes and, digging her toes into the quarter-inch wire mesh of the sixteen-foot gate, had scrambled to the top with incredible rapidity. She was just climbing down the outside of the gate when the guard in the tower on the hill saw her and immediately telephoned to the guard at the main gate; also to the guard arguing with the men in the motor-boat. Upon hearing the telephone bell ringing in his station, that guard had walked back into it; at the same time, keeping the kiosk between her and the approaching guard, Nance Belden had dashed down to the beach and commence swimming rapidly toward the motor-boat, the motor of which instantly started, and the boat commenced edging in to pick her up.

When the guard in the kiosk, apprised of what was taking place, ran out with a rifle in his hand and shouted to Nance Belden to come back or he would shoot her, a machine-gun in the motor-boat promptly came into action against him. He had not been hit, but a shower of bullets had spattered the ground around and in front of him and another burst had gone over his head and through the sentry box. The guard had fired once at the Belden woman and hit her, but immediately thereafter, fearful of being killed, he had thrown himself flat on the ground.

The guard in the watch-tower on the hill had then brought his machine-gun into action. His first burst had been short, and drew answering fire from the machine gunner in the boat. Although the range was four hundred yards, the first burst from the motor-boat tore through the wooden watch-tower, which rather distracted the aim of the guard there; nevertheless, the latter stuck to his gun and continued to fire, spattering bullets around the swimming girl and into the boat.

The men in the boat did not hesitate, but came on through the hail of bullets; the escaping prisoner had in the meanwhile either sunk or dived; at any rate a widening tinge of red appeared on the water. She was down about thirty seconds, then her head emerged close to the boat, and she swam with one arm to the side of it; a man reached over and grasped her under both arms and jerked her into the boat, which instantly turned, put on full speed and raced away close past two other boats. Fearful of killing innocent people, the guard in the watch-tower held his fire until the escaping boat was in the clear; then he and the guard in another tower came into action again. But a target moving at a speed of forty-five miles an hour is not easily hit; the fire was either over or short and the boat did not stop. When it was out of range, it turned, and in the rapidly fading light of the winter day, headed up into San Pablo bay, running close to the south shore to avoid the chop of the waves in this shallow expanse of water. They ran without lights.

While the course they had taken would seem to indicate a desire to run up Carquinez straits to the Sacramento or the San Joaquin rivers, land and escape in a waiting automobile into central California, the warden realized that his quarry was not lacking in intelligence; that, fast as they fled, they would realize that the telephone is faster; that the roar of their motor must betray them a mile away. He had, therefore, taken the precaution to notify the chiefs of police of Pittsburg, Martinez, Sausalito, Richmond, Berkeley, Oakland and San Francisco, leaving to these the task of notifying intermediate points. The warden had a suspicion the fugitives would double back to San Francisco—particularly since the girl was wounded and must be hidden in order to receive medical attention.

"And here she is," Dan McNamara muttered. "Cripes, what a woman! Lord, how I love a woman with brains and courage. Just a little simple matter of taking pains and taking risks. She didn't go in to the dining hall for dinner with the other prisoners. Smart! Knew she couldn't make a fast swim on a full stomach. Smart enough to notice the warden's oversight in failing to fill in with barbed wire topping that eighteen-inch space at the top of his gate. Of course they figured they needn't bother with that, because no woman could climb a sixteen-foot wire mesh fence anyhow, and if she did she'd only drop down into the waiting arms of the guard, who is never absent, night or day. But Nance Belden knew she could climb that fence barefoot; she knew she had thirty seconds to do it and a drop on the other side from the top of the gate. Her job was to induce the guard to turn his back—and her friends in the boat did that!

"She knew she'd been seen from the watch-tower on the hill and the guard at the gates notified by telephone; as he returned from the edge of the beach, around the south side of his kiosk, Nance slipped by him on the north side and was in the water as the guard took up the 'phone. Smart! She knew no guard will stick under machine-gun fire at fifty yards, merely to stop a woman convict escaping from prison. Smart! Sank and swam under water—and then the zigzag course between the boats of the other fishermen, after they picked her up. Fine psychology—she engineered it all—and I know she's a nut! And then straight to Lanny for medical attention—straight to the one human being she knew she could trust—no, I'll not send her back. And I don't particularly want to catch her friends either. I'll say they're friends! Wish I had a couple of friends that'd come on through machine-gun fire for me! I had thought the world was selfish and cruel and thieving and lying—but there's nobility left in it after all."

Stephen Burt came out of the bedroom and sat down and stared at the chief of police with grave interest. "Well, my good Javert," he said presently.

"Your good what?"

"I called you Javert. Don't you know who Javert was?"

Dan McNamara shook his head. "I never picked him up, Doc."

"You wouldn't. He was a character in 'Les Miserables,' a novel by Victor Hugo. He was a fly-cop in Paris, and he pursued an ex-convict named Jean Valjean for twenty years, because he believed the man was a crook. Once a crook, always a crook, was Javert's philosophy. And when he discovered at last he had the goods on Jean Valjean and it was his duty to arrest him, he discovered simultaneously that Jean Valjean was also a good and noble man, which proved extremely embarrassing to Javert."

"I understand how that could be, all right, Doc. What did Javert do then?"

"He climbed up on the railing of a bridge over the Seine, unpinned his shield, threw it into the river and jumped in after it."

"He committed suicide in order to give his man the breaks."

"Exactly."

"Well," Dan McNamara decided after pondering this a half minute, "I wouldn't be boob enough to do that. He should have made a stool pigeon out of Jean Valjean and maybe he'd have gotten somewhere in his job."

Stephen smiled. He liked this heavy man, with the Celtic face as inscrutable as a Chinaman's. As a specialist in mental diseases he knew the part heredity plays in the formation of character, and one did not have to look at the chief twice to know that he came of courageous ancestry. No vague fears or anxieties in this fellow, Stephen thought. Courageous men are usually honest men; even when they are not honest they are sufficiently courageous to pay the price, no matter how high, for the things they do with their eyes open—to pay it cheerfully and refrain thereafter from whimpering.

"So you're going to protect this girl, are you, Chief?"

SMALL WORD "IF" AND ITS PART IN WORLD HISTORY

"If," says Albert Payson Terhune, writing in the Elks Magazine, has done more to change the course of history's wayward currents than all of the forces of man rolled together. Here are some of his own best ones:

If Thomas Edison, when a poor newsboy, hadn't been hit over the ears by a cranky brakeman for stealing a ride on a train, he wouldn't have been deaf. If he hadn't been deaf, he would not have perfected the phonograph.

If Napoleon's mapmaker had not formed the habit of scamping his work, he would have drawn the line indicating the sunken road at Waterloo and the French emperor would have carried the day.

If the mother of George Washington had not been stricken with a sudden hysterical whim just as her son was leaving to join the British navy, the father of his country would probably have been a British naval officer.

If a bullet had swerved by a very few inches in 1914, when a crazed student aimed at an Austrian grand duke, perhaps there would have been no World war.

If Patrick Henry had not been too lazy to make a success of his grocery store, he would not have turned to statesmanship and stirred the nation with his oratory.

If Major Andre had been content to wait for his boat to come back to its moorings at West Point, or if he had chosen some other land route to New York, or if he had had the sense to keep his mouth shut instead of babbling needlessly when he met three card players along the road—the United States probably would be a British province today. As it was, he was captured and Benedict Arnold's treason was discovered and America was saved.

ANNUAL CONTEST WINNER OF THE BODIEN TROPHY

Hazel Hill of Woodrow Wilson Adjudged As Having Best Essay

The annual contest for 1935 for the Arthur J. Bodien trophy was won by Hazel Hill, student in the Low Eighth Grade at the Woodrow Wilson school.

This trophy is a bronze plaque replica of the head of Abraham Lincoln, mounted on wood. The emblem passes to the school in which the winning pupil is enrolled and remains there for a year.

The winner in 1933 was Violet Tosetti of Jefferson school, and in 1934 Julius Camenzind of the same school won the high honor.

The judges of the essays this year were Mrs. Clifton, president Crocker P. T. A.; Mrs. Gimovsky, president General Pershing P. T. A.; Mrs. Hollingsworth, president Colma P. T. A., and Mrs. Foreman, acting for Mrs. Jones, president Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P .T. A.

The winning essay follows:

ABRAHAM LINSOLN

One of Abraham Lincoln's chief characteristics was honesty. He was honest in his play and in his work. When he went into his business he was still honest. A story has been told of him as a clerk in a grocery store. He was selling a customer some groceries. After she was gone he discovered that he had charged her a few cents too much. He stopped his work and walked two miles to give the customer the correct amount of change.

Another one of Lincoln's characteristics was kindness. He was kind to both human beings and animals. One day he was walking in the country with some of his friends when he came upon a small bird which had fallen out of its nest and was fluttering helplessly on the ground. As he stopped to pick it up the other men laughed at him. Lincoln stopped, picked up the bird, put it in its nest and went on to join his friends. Lincoln was never known to harm any animal. He was also kind to his people.

Lincoln was very poor when he was a boy and was still poor when he was a man. But being poor did not stop his education or his developing his character. It does not take money to make people great. Many of our presidents have been poor boys. Lincoln was very poor, but that fact did not stop him from becoming a very great man.

Honesty and kindness are but two of Lincoln's many characteristics. Lincoln was a very great man. No one will forget the man who set the slaves free and saved the Union.

BOY SCOUTS HOLD SILVER JUBILEE

A Silver Jubilee Rally was held by the Boy Scouts of America of Division A, San Francisco Area, at the Jefferson Union High School Auditorium on Tuesday evening.

A parade of all Boy Scouts in this vicinity had been planned to precede the rally at the high school. However, owing to the inclement weather, this feature was abandoned.

A large audience was on hand, notwithstanding the dampness, and they thoroughly enjoyed the excellent program rendered by the officers and members of the various Scout Troops.

An excellent concert was rendered by the Daly City Band preceding the main exercises. The organization made a wonderful showing and much favorable comment was heard, both with regard to their efficient playing and the splendid appearance of their new uniforms.

The Daly City Fire Department was heartily commended by a great number of the members of the audience for the efficient manner in which they handled the exits and the stairways.

FOUNDERS DAY EXERCISES BY CROCKER UNIT

Interesting Program Given And History Of Body Is Reviewed

On Tuesday evening, February 12, Crocker P. T. A. held their Founders' Day exercises. Mrs. Nora Clifton, president, opened the unit with a short business meeting. Plans for the whist for February 21, were discussed. Mrs. Eason gave a short report on supervised play, and Mrs. Clifton read an excellent report on the last Seventeenth District meeting.

After the business meeting the evening was turned over to Mrs. J. E. Walker who had prepared a very interesting program in commeration of Founders' Day.

Mrs. Ivy Alexander, Crocker's first president, gave an entertaining history of her year as president. Mrs. Julia V. Jordan took up the history where Mrs. Alexander left off, and also gave a short history of Founders' Day. Mrs. J. J. Garland, Seventeenth Distrct president, gave a very instructive talk on the history of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, even touching on the International Congress. She spoke especially on the philanthropic work of the organization, both in California and throughout the United States. Those members who were unable to be present because of the Boy Scout meeting and other meetings which were held last evening do not know what they missed by not hearing what Mrs. Garland had to say. Mrs. J. E. Baughn, Seventeenth District finance and budget chairman, said a few words.

Mrs. Walker had prepared a short pageant which was participated in by Mrs. Nora Clifton, Mrs. K. Katch, Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Howe. It was a lovely candle lighting ceremony which was beautifully done. After the meeting, several of the ladies gathered around the piano and sang while the two birthday cakes, one for Crocker unit and one for the National, were being cut. The tables were appropriately decorated in both the blue and gold of the National Congress, and the green and white of the Crocker unit. Little favors were made of large candies with candles in the center, making lovely little candlesticks. Two beautiful and delicious cakes were served, and some of the fathers who were unable to be present during the meeting, came in for the refreshments. Mr. Augustien the progress which is being made in the new schools, and the ladies were very happy to learn that in the near future bids are to be asked for, and we hope that by next term Crocker P. T. A. will have a place in Crocker school to hold their meetings.

Mr. Augustien spoke of the meeting which is to be held this Friday night to talk over plans for the supervised play. He urged everyone who is interested to be present if they want supervised play to be continued.

The next executive board meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Julia V. Jordan, 576 Bellevue avenue, on February 28. Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Pauw will be joint hostesses.
